

PPF FAQ

About

In 2017, RISSB redesigned the PPF process into an online information and project prioritisation system. This page provides answers to stakeholder's questions and will be updated as the need arises over the course of the PPF.

New stakeholder questions should be submitted to info@rissb.com.au or via our 'Ask RISSB About the Products' page.

How long will the online forum and ranking period run for?

The forum will take place over a four-week period comprising a two-week information period followed by a two-week ranking period. During the information period all new product development proposals will be made available on RISSB's website.

How will industry votes / rankings be counted?

All interested individuals are entitled to participate and to rank RISSB's proposed new products in order of importance from highest to lowest priority. Number 1 is assigned to the product that is deemed to be of the highest priority to industry. Once ranking closes, a pre-determined industry / member weighting is then applied to arrive at a priority order for RISSB's future work plan.

I have an idea for a new product, can I put it up for consideration?

We welcome all ideas for new products. To be considered in the coming financial year's work plan, please complete a RISSB product proposal and prioritisation form and email it to info@rissb.com.au.

I have an idea for a new product, but I've missed the PPF submissions cut-off date

RISSB encourages all stakeholders to submit proposals for the consideration of the following year's PPF. Any submissions received throughout the year will be noted, reviewed and put forward for prioritisation in the following year.

What happens after I submit a new product development proposal?

The proposal is reviewed by a Standing Committee. Submissions are then made publicly available during the information and ranking periods on RISSB's website.

I'm not sure what information to include in the product proposal and prioritisation form

We've prepared a guide to help you complete the form. Please read the completing a RISSB product proposal guide for more information. If, after reading the form, you are still unsure about what information to provide, please email info@rissb.com.au.
